Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

This two-story framed and weatherboarded pyramidal-roofed T-plan house faces north onto Charles Street. It has a basically square form that is masked by the off-center front-facing gable and the two story polygonal bay with the faceted conical roof. There is also a gabled bay facing onto the west side of the house and a long two-story rear ell. A hipped-roof one-story porch shelters the facade and the east gable end. It is supported on Doric columns that are connected by balusters and rails. The east section of the porch is screened in. The original siding of this house has been replaced. A number of recent additions to the house have to do with its use as a bed and breakfast business.
